This years open event involved the formation of a standing wave between two speakers approximately 10 meters apart. The frequency of the wave could be varied by use of a function generator. The idea of the contest was to dial in a particular frequency and then have the team determine what that frequency was. It required the team to enter the wave field and map out the nodes produced by the standing wave.